Sorrentino: Mosby’s Textbook for Nursing Assistants, 9th Edition

Chapter 45: Cardiovascular, Respiratory, and Lymphatic Disorders

Student Assignment

Date: ______________ Name: _____________________________

COMPLETION

1. Congenital means _________________________________.

2. Why is hypertension called “the silent killer”?

3. Hypertension can lead to _________________________________.

4. List three risk factors for coronary artery disease (CAD) that can be controlled.
   a. ______________________________________________________________________
   b. ______________________________________________________________________
   c. ______________________________________________________________________

5. Describe the two parts of cardiac rehabilitation:
   a. ______________________________________________________________________
   b. ______________________________________________________________________
   c. ______________________________________________________________________
   d. ______________________________________________________________________
   e. ______________________________________________________________________

6. Angina occurs when the heart needs more _________________________________.

7. With ___________________________, part of the heart muscle dies.

8. List the two disorders grouped under chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.
   a. ______________________________________________________________________
   b. ______________________________________________________________________

9. Treatment for influenza involves _________________________________.

10. ___________________________ is an inflammation and infection of lung tissue.
11. Pneumonia from _________________________ is common in older persons. Dysphagia, decreased cough and gag reflexes, and nervous system disorders are risk factors.

12. TB is spread by __________________________________________________________________________.